Description
I'm a new user of Quassel, and I think it's a real nice software, but just yesterday I was looking for a function that I think would be very nice to have on it, but I didn't find it, so I'll try to explain what I mean.... Sometime, some channel is really quite even if some people is connected, and happen for example that I write a message and while I'm waiting for some answer, I keep going with some other stuff, and if someone answer me without use my name on the message, I didn't get notification... So I think would be nice to have a function which can be activate/deactivate (just for a single channel) by using right click on the channel (in the channel list), just a new row on the pop-up which already exists, to have a notification for any new message on that channel, so even if I'm doing something else , I don't have to worry about the chat, if someone is answering or not, because right now, when it happen, I always have to bring forward Quassel to check it, and pull back if nobody has answered yet... I think this simple features will improve a lot a piece of software which is already great, and I guess isn't so difficult to implement it What do you think about it ? In anycase, thanks a lot for your great job guys.... Alex
